

8. Patients who died

Recommendations

- Training must be provided for junior doctors in the recognition of critical illness and the immediate management of fluid and oxygen therapy in these patients.
- Consultants must supervise junior doctors more closely and should actively support juniors in the management of patients rather than only reacting to requests for help.
- Junior doctors must seek advice more readily. This may be from specialised teams e.g. outreach services or from the supervising consultant.