

10. Quality of medical records and audit

Key findings

- The quality of medical records was poor.
- Documentation of resuscitation decisions rarely happened, even in patients at high risk of deterioration.
- Retrospective review (audit) of patients' management was infrequent.
- Where retrospective review did occur, there was a low level of participation by referring physicians.